CANINE COUGH:

Unfortunately, canine cough is a possibility anywhere dogs congregate including kennels, daycares, groom shops and even dog parks despite everyone's best efforts to prevent it. Canine Cough acts very much like a cold or flu in people. Canine cough is caused by many different airborne viruses and bacteria and the Bordetella vaccine is effective against only the most common strains. Therefore, a dog can come down with canine cough even if it is fully vaccinated. We require Bordetella be administered every six months for daycare and annually for overnight boarding. The symptoms for canine cough are very similar to the human cold (coughing, sneezing and nasal discharge) and we strongly ask all clients to not bring their dog to daycare (or overnight boarding) if they are exhibiting any of those symptoms. Fortunately, just like the human cold, canine cough usually runs its course without complications, however, a veterinarian should be consulted.

ILLNESS:

If we notice, during your dog's daycare visit, any symptoms of illness (such as canine cough or other contagious illness) we will notify you to pick up your dog as soon as possible. Your dog will then be removed from daycare and quarantined until it is picked up

INJURY:

Our staff's most important goal is to maintain a calm and reasonably quiet daycare environment but injuries, while rare, can still occur. In that event, we will notify you of the problem, and provide on-site care or transport for veterinarian care as in our opinion is most appropriate
